A long time ago, there was a Grasshopper Kingdom named Loktus. Near the Kingdom, there was a grasshopper village with a spectacular view. There, also lived a little family who had a child with a disability. The child's name was Soja. He had legs which were not the same length since birth.

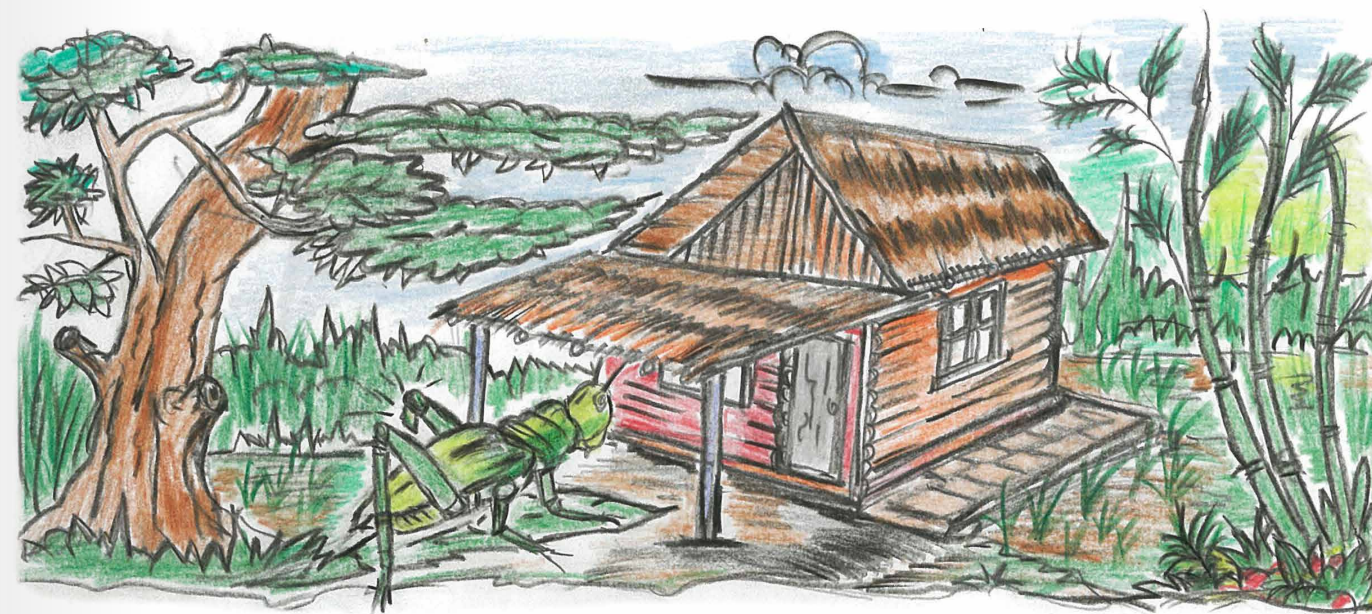

Unfortunately, Soja always got bullied by all of the grasshoppers. He could never make friends. Even his parents had trouble in making friends because of his disability.

One night, Soja heard a conversation between his parents. "They're always making fun of me at the market, and it's only because of Soja. I don't know why they treat us poorly," his mother said.

Since then, Soja made a plan to get out of his house without his parents knowing because he felt so bad about his parents. Soja started to leave his house in the middle of the night with a little food and a torch. After walking for so long, he arrived in a big forest and decided to take a rest, "I'm so tired. Maybe I'll take a rest for a moment," Soja said.

Soja fell asleep until the next morning because he was really tired. When he woke up, a brilliant idea came to him. He decided to stay there and started building a wooden house. And when he finished, he felt so thirsty. So, he went looking for some water at the river. When he arrived at the river, he saw a beautiful butterfly crying on a leaf.

Soja flew to the leaf and carefully approached the butterfly. "Hey, who are you?," Soja asked. "Oh...hey...I'm Haidy," the butterfly answered. She seemed very confused and scared at the same time. "Why are you crying, Haidy?" Soja asked again. "I was banished by the butterflies in my village because my wings broke when I was flying yesterday. Well, I don't know where to go," the butterfly cried.

Once again, a brilliant idea came to Soja. "What if you stay with me? I also have the same fate as you. Do you see my legs? They're not the same length since birth. I decided to get out of my house because I knew that I was a big problem to my little family. I thought it was for the best," Soja said.

Finally, Haidy stayed with Soja. Day by day, many animals who also had disabilities came to the place where Soja and Haidy lived, and the place became a new unique kingdom. Other kingdoms looked at them with admiration. And they realized that differences are a beauty in this world. Soja and friends lived happily and peacefully with their differences.

Soja became a new hero for all disabled animals.

No need to be a super hero with superpowers. But we can be a hero with a beautiful heart like Soja.
